MediCapture, Inc. Names Director of OEM Sales

Ben Stluka To Lead North American OEM Sales Team

PLYMOUTH MEETING, PA (May 29, 2008) – MediCapture, Inc., a leading manufacturer of medical video recording solutions, announced today it has appointed Ben Stluka as Director of North American OEM Sales. Mr. Stluka will be responsible for OEM sales of MediCapture's digital video recording technologies in the U.S. and Canada.

"Ben has been instrumental in leading us through a period of exceptional growth as we have expanded our global market share, launched five new digital video recorder models, set up a international distributor network, and established OEM sales with major medical manufacturers," said Michael Bishop, MediCapture's President and CEO. "Ben helped shape the sales strategies that have made MediCapture a leader in medical digital video recording, and he is the ideal person to head up our new initiative to expand OEM sales. With over a decade of experience in the medical device field, Ben brings a wealth of sales knowledge to this new endeavor. He has built relationships with several major medical device companies over the years – we're anticipating that these will serve as the foundation for growing our North American OEM business as we drive to duplicate the success we've experienced with our OEM partners in Europe."

"The popularity and proven performance of our MediCap™ line of digital video recorders has led to significant inroads in OEM markets," commented Mr. Stluka. "Our board-level solutions allow manufacturers to quickly add digital recording capabilities to their imaging devices and help give them a competitive edge with very little upfront investment in R & D. I'm looking forward to introducing our OEM customers to MediCapture's next generation 'video capture engine' which we will be showing at Medica 2008. This new board is smaller, more affordable, has more features, and is even easier to integrate than our previous models."
